One of the most famous panics in the United States was begun by a radio broadcast. In 1938, CBS radio broadcast a dramatization of a science fiction novel by H.G. Wells called "War of the Worlds". It told the story of an invasion from Mars with the Martians landing in New Jersey and taking over New York fifteen minutes later. The story was told in a realistic fashion with the actors playing reporters giving "live" reports from the scene. At the beginning of the broadcast, there was an announcement that the story was fictional, but most people tuned in too late to hear it. As a result, there were traffic jams all over New York and New Jersey as people tried to flee what they thought was a real invasion.

29. One can understand from the passage that ----.

- A) a panic was caused by people believing a fictional radio broadcast.
- B) H.G. Wells was a famous non-fiction author.
- C) a reporter named H.G. Wells spread a fictional story to frighten people.
- D) Martians landed in New Jersey in 1938.
- E) reporters giving live reports played a trick on people.

30. Which of the following was one reason that caused people to panic?

- A) The majority of them missed the announcement that the story was fiction.
- B) New Jersey, which was invaded by Martians, was very close to New York.
- C) People believed that Martians were cruel and frightening creatures.
- D) CBS radio was known for its serious documentary programmes.
- E) The television scenes were so realistic that almost anyone would believe them.

31. One generalisation we can make from the passage is that ----.

- A) Martians have the power to take control of New Jersey and New York in just 15 minutes.
- B) New York and New Jersey often suffer from traffic jams.
- C) H.G. Wells wrote stories credible enough to take in everyone.
- D) radio stations often broadcast fictional stories deliberately to cause a panic.
- E) sometimes people will believe things no matter how improbable they are.

“The Little Prince” is the most famous novel of French aristocrat, writer, poet and leading aviator Antoine de Saint-Exupéry and has been winning the hearts of people since it was first published in 1943. Many people understand our little hero’s experiences, get upset when his heart is broken and justify the sayings of him. While reading his story, they look back on their lives again and realize how much older and more mature they have got in finding a meaning in life. As the Little Prince said “Adults always need to have things explained.” Although Little Prince features a lot of fantastical and unrealistic elements, most of the people, especially, youngsters who have read the book believe it’s really a great book and it actually makes one think because of the deep lessons it gives.

35. What is the author’s attitude towards Exupéry’s ‘The Little Prince’?

- A) sarcastic B) pessimistic C) favouring
D) critical E) neutral

36. The author of the passage mainly aims to explain ----.

- A) how French literature influences our lives.
B) why children books sell more than their adult equivalents.
C) childhood traumas of a well-known protagonist.
D) the popularity of “the Little Prince” amongst the readers.
E) what we should expect from a book.

37. While saying “Adults always need to have things explained”, the Little Prince may be referring to ----.

- A) adults who are not smart enough.
B) the catastrophic effects adults can leave on the young people.
C) the generation gap between adults and youngsters.
D) his experiences’ being more precious than his parents’.
E) the difficulties of life.

38 - 40. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Readers of factual material should bear in mind this aspect: their authors, like authors of fiction, have beliefs and theories that affect the way they present their subject matter. For example, a British professor's account of the American Revolution would be different from the version written by a professor from the United States. Because of national loyalties, the two scholars might look at the events from different angles: the former as a colonial rebellion on a distant continent, and the second as a struggle for personal freedom. The two authors would write from different points of view and express certain opinions because they have different ways of looking at the subject.

38. Which option includes the best statement to summarize the passage?

- A) fact and fiction actually refer to the same thing.
- B) the American Revolution was a struggle for personal freedom.
- C) American scholars are more objective than British authors.
- D) even facts can be interpreted differently by different people.
- E) there was no personal freedom in America before the Revolution.

39. The writer believes that ----.

- A) authors from different countries will always have cultural conflicts.
- B) scholars from the United States understand their history better than British scholars do.
- C) readers should prefer fictional books to factual ones.
- D) it is right to struggle for personal freedom.
- E) authors also reflect their own ideas when presenting facts.

40. It is implied in the passage that ----.

- A) some factual books are not really worth reading.
- B) Some authors purposely try to deceive their readers.
- C) a reader of factual material should be aware of the author's background.
- D) an author's point of view is less important than the facts he presents.
- E) there are always two ways of looking at facts.

41 - 43. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

An average child of 5 years old uses only 1,500 of the 150,000 "dictionary" words that a modern language contains. But this small treasury is used very intensively by him during the years of learning, at the rate of about 1,000 words an hour, or from 7,000 to 15.000 words each day for an active child. School quickly increases his vocabulary, but leaves him with less opportunity for using it. At 10 years old, his treasury amounts to 7,000 words, of which about 30% are used actively ---- the remainder is seldom or never used --- and in an hour he will use about 700 words. By the time he enters university, his word inventory will have grown to 20,000, and on graduation to 60,000, but of these only 10% -20% will be in active use.

41. Which of the following options can be inferred from the passage about a 5-year-old child?

- A) He or she has an enormous vocabulary for his age.
- B) He or she can learn 1,000 words in an hour.
- C) He or she knows, but doesn't use, about 150,000 words.
- D) He or she learns about 7,000 to 15,000 words each day.
- E) He or she uses only one percent of available words.

42. The passage tells us that when a child goes to school, ----.

- A) the amount of vocabulary he knows, and his usage of it, increase considerably.
- B) he is able to use more than half of the words found in a standard dictionary.
- C) he learns many more words, but uses a smaller percentage of them than before.
- D) he finds more opportunities to use his vocabulary.
- E) he starts using about 7,000 words daily.

43. According to the passage, an average university student -----.

- A) spends at least fifteen hours of a day listening or speaking.
- B) uses about 7,000 words, though he knows almost all the vocabulary.
- C) can only use half of the words he knows in everyday life.
- D) graduates with less than half of the vocabulary of his mother tongue.
- E) can actively use most of the words he has learnt during education.
